FINANCIAL TWIST B

One of your family members has lost her/his job and you have been struggling to find extra work to help with money at home. The extra shifts you have picked up are cutting into your social time and the little bit of money they bring in isn't enough to make a difference. Luckily, there is some money put aside in a Savings account for your education. You know that there is enough in this account for future plans but the money may be needed to keep the family going.

FINANCIAL TWIST A

The commercial you did has gone viral on the internet and you are now getting monthly residual payment cheques that cover your rent and a car payment. You are not struggling to cover bills and generally have more than enough extra money at the end of the month to go out with your friends and are even putting some extra away to do some traveling next year.

FINANCIAL TWIST C

You've moved out of your family home to follow your dream, but the reality is that rent is a lot more than you'd thought it would be. Your roommate walked out and left you with three months' rent unpaid. You've been unable to actually find any work beyond a minimum wage job at a small restaurant. Whatever plans you had for post-secondary work or school now seem like distant dreams that are out of your reach.
